Plan 3 - investment flexibility, account protection, long-term results

In a recent special edition of the Plan 3 Report, we announced a policy on excessive trading that went into place July 7, 2006 on all Plan 3 Self-Directed Investment Program funds. It's the same policy that has worked well in the International Fund - a member who transfers more than $1,000 out of a fund cannot transfer $1,000 or more back into the same fund for 30 calendar days.

Excessive trading involves transferring large amounts of money between investment options with the hope of acquiring short-term gains. Excessive trades interfere with the Washington State Investment Board's ability to manage the funds, since cash must be pulled out of the market to accommodate the transactions.

Plan 3 funds are not designed for daily trading or short-term gains. Though the majority of Plan 3 members average less than one trade every 30 calendar days, excessive trading by even a few can negatively impact everyone. We are committed to protecting the investments of all members.

If you have questions, please call DRS at 1-800-547-6657 or ICMA-RC at 1-888-711-8773. We're always glad to help.

Market Commentary as of May 31, 2006

Corporate profitability has remained at exceptional levels with corporate earnings continuing to reach record levels. Gross Domestic Product (GDP) growth measures the value of all goods and services produced and provided in the United States and is expected to stay in the 3% range for the foreseeable future - this is considered a healthy rate of growth. In recent years, high consumer spending has largely been responsible for keeping the U.S. economy prosperous. More recently, however, consumer spending has slowed but is being offset by higher corporate spending.

Bonds

At its May meeting, the Federal Reserve once again increased the overnight lending rate by a quarter-point to 5.25% - the 16th consecutive quarter-point hike since policy makers began their tightening campaign in June 2004. Bond returns remained weak during the three-month period, as the Lehman Brothers Aggregate Index fell -1.27 percent during this time. Higher yielding issues were once again the standout performers as investors continued their search for income. The Lehman Brothers High Yield Index gained 1.2 percent during the three-month period.

Stocks

Stocks nearly reached all-time highs in early May, but tumbled later in the month as inflation fears overrode confidence in corporate America. The losses were broad-based as stocks of all sizes and styles experienced erosions to the gains established early in the quarter. Large company stocks slightly outpaced small company stocks during the period, but small company stocks experienced more volatility. The S&P 500 Index finished the quarter slightly in the red with a loss of -0.3 percent while mid and small company stocks finished with losses of -0.3 percent and -1.05 percent respectively as measured by the Russell Mid Cap and Russell 2000 indices. Value-oriented stocks outpaced their growth counterparts across the market capitalization spectrum. Technology and Health Care stocks experienced the largest losses for the quarter.

International stock markets continued to outperform the U.S. stock market, mostly the result of currency gains as opposed to pure stock gains. After showing strength in 2005, the U.S. dollar has reversed course thus far in 2006. Foreign investors have concerns regarding the Federal Reserve's suggestion that rising interest rates may be coming to an end, as well as worries over the growing U.S. trade deficit. The MSCI ACWI ex-U.S. finished the three-month period with a gain of 3.2 percent, despite actually losing ground when measured in local currencies. After a tremendous run over the past three years, Emerging Markets pulled back during the quarter.
