MARKET COMMENTARY

as of November 30, 2007

Volatility continued to be the leading story in markets across the globe. Investors dealt with continued concerns surrounding the crumbling housing market, the uncertain direction of the federal funds rate, and the turmoil that has spread throughout the credit markets. Additionally, U.S. companies have experienced a significant slow-down as many have lowered future earnings projections. The U.S. market rebounded somewhat during the three-month period when the Fed cut the overnight rate twice to its current level of 4.5%. Unfortunately for investors, the future is unclear, at least in the near term, as many of these concerns may persist into 2008.

Bonds

Bond markets continued to benefit from the uncertainty in global markets. The most conservative bonds, particularly U.S. Treasuries, were the biggest beneficiaries of this uncertainty as investors sought higher quality bonds. The Lehman Brothers Aggregate Index rose 3.5% during the three-month period, while the more risky Lehman Brothers High Yield Index gained only 1.0%.

Stocks

Despite an impressive rally at the end of November, the U.S. stock market experienced its sharpest one-month decline in over five years.

Enhanced Online Security Through Account Access

The Department of Retirement Systems, through its third-party record keeper, ICMA-RC, is taking steps to make it even safer to manage your account online. Previously, the User ID was your Social Security Number or reference code to log into the Account Access online system. You now have the ability to select your own user ID. Here's how it works:

- Your user ID must be between 6 and 32 characters, numbers or a combination of both.
- You will be required to answer three security questions that will identify you to the system, such as your high school, father's date of birth, pet's name, favorite color, etc.
- The system will also allow you to select a graphic that will indicate you are officially on Account Access, the secure Plan 3 web site.

If you already utilize Account Access, you can keep your current password.

If you have never utilized Account Access, take advantage of this tool to complete transactions, such as changing your investment allocation or transferring between funds in the Self-Directed Program with pre-existing limits.

You can also view the personal rates of return on your account for the past several years.

During the month, investors found little refuge regardless of company size or investment style. The S&P 500 Index finished the quarter with a 1.0% gain while small company stocks fared much worse: the Russell 2000 Index lost 2.9%. Growth-oriented stocks once again outpaced value in what has recently become a consistent theme as each quarter passes. Sector returns were mixed during the quarter. Consistent with last quarter, Financials experienced the hardest impact as some of the most prominent financial institutions were hit with fallout from the challenges in the subprime market. Utilities and Consumer Staples provided the largest positive returns and undoubtedly were the primary drivers that kept the S&P 500 Index in positive territory for the period.

International stock markets once again fared better than domestic stocks. Currency continued to play a major role as the U.S. dollar lost ground to most major foreign currencies. While the outperformance of international stock markets versus the U.S. has been dramatic for some time, in general, international companies have not fared that much better than U.S. companies when valued in their own currency. The vast majority of the outperformance that international stocks have achieved has been heavily dependent on the currency tradeoff of a weakening U.S. dollar. For the quarter, the MSCI ACWI ex-US rose 7.5% while emerging markets continued to soar, with the MSCI EM gaining 14.7% during the three-month period.
